'COME, JOIN THE FIESTA'

That is the invitation these two alluring San Carlos senoritas bring to you from the San Mateo County Products and Floral Fiesta, to be held at Bay Meadows, Sept. 23 to 26. They are Rowena Connor, left, and Helen Cauman, a pair of the group of 15 charming hostesses at the county's annual fete.

Club Directors Seek McGrath Defeat in 1938

Highland Group Avers Law Not Enforced In District

The first gun in what promises to be a bitter sheriff's campaign next year was fired Tuesday.

It was a combined volley from the directors of the Highlands District Improvement Club, which has 501 members in the Emerald Lake district, and was aimed at Sheriff James J. McGrath, who some time ago announced that he would be a candidate for re-election.

Following lengthy discussion of the law enforcement—or rather, asserted lack of it—in the Emerald Lake district as far as the sheriff's office is concerned, the directors unanimously decided to recommend that club members oppose Sheriff McGrath in the coming election, they reported.

A number of events occurring both recently and over a period of time influenced the directors in their decision, they said.

BULLET HITS UMBRELLA

Some time back they made complaints both to the sheriff and the board of supervisors of indiscriminate shooting in the area. One member of the Highlands club, it is related, was sitting in his yard under a beach umbrella when a bullet whistled over his head. Looking up, he saw that it had passed through the parasol.

The sheriff's office was notified immediately, directors said, but the reply over the telephone was asserted by to the effect that "What's the matter? You have a private patrolman out there, haven't you?" No officer was sent to investigate, the directors charged.

The matter of the frequent careless shooting was also called to attention of the supervisors, as well as to Sheriff McGrath personally, in letters, they said. The supervisors referred the letter to McGrath, but, directors charge, he failed even to acknowledge receipt of the letter, much less take any action.

MUST EMPLOY PATROLMAN

The shooting incident is only one of the numerous examples of lack of law enforcement in the district, even when it is specifically requested, directors asserted, pointing out that they are forced to employ a private patrolman to assure some measure of safety in their residential area.

"We certainly can't recommend that the club support Sheriff McGrath for re-election," Mrs. J. Blanche Ball, second vice president and one of the founders of the rapidly growing and influential organization asserted.

BEFORE SUPERVISORS

The Highlands club's attack on McGrath's regime as sheriff followed closely the suing of the sheriff by Robert P. Dickinson, operator of a private patrol in the south end of the county, for $25,000, charging false arrest.

Sheriff McGrath recently stripped Dickinson of his special deputy badge and seized his gun, ordering him to stop patrolling the area, Dickinson charged, and asked the board of supervisors to adopt an ordinance permitting such private operators to work.

The question is to be up again before the supervisors at their 1 p.m. meeting tomorrow.

Swing into it senoritas and caballeros—this is fiesta time!

That was the word that went out today as seven more days were left for the big San Mateo County products and floral fiesta which opens Thursday, September 23, at Bay Meadows.

Pompons old men doffed their derbies for sombreros. Dignified old women forsook convention wear for the things senoras wore in the old days, and of course the younger folks had a head start on everybody.

Bumper strips for the cars, colorful stickers for the windshield—all of these were a means of advertising the big event, and citizens were urged to ask for them at fiesta headquarters, 116 B street, San Mateo, or in chambers of commerce all over the county.

Some of the talent will be loaned to the fandango to be staged at the junior college gymnasium as a prelude to the fiesta Saturday night.

The fandango is being sponsored by the San Mateo junior chamber of commerce but is a county-wide event the success of which will reflect the future of the fiesta.

Young Alvin Masters, high school student from San Mateo, who is a pageant actor, will dedicate his song over Buddha's Amateur hour, KFRC, starting at 8 Saturday night, to the fandango and the fiesta. Alvin will face the "mike" attired in costume.

Miss Ruth Lindorf, Daly City hostess, will also be heard over the radio when she is interviewed about the fiesta at 11 a.m. over station KGO on the Roads to Romance program.

Still more radio time will be had Sunday night when the Tales of California half hour is dedicated to the fiesta, at 9 p.m. over KGO.

Planning Commission Defers Zoning Action

Redwood City city planning commission met last night for a long discussion that brought out no decisions.

Questions considered included set-back lines on the James street extension to the Southern Pacific depot, and at Harrison and Duane streets for property owned by John E. McCarthy.

All matters were deferred until the next regular meeting in October.

$7500 Award Is Attacked

Nadine Babb, 11-month-od San Jose child, is not to be awarded without a further legal battle the $7500 damages given her by a Redwood City superior court jury September 3.

Attorneys for Defendant J. H. Murray, San Francisco labor leader and driver of the car which collided with the machine operated by Keith Babb, the child's father, filed notice here Monday of their intention to ask for a new trial on the grounds that the evidence submitted did not warrant such a large verdict.

In two other damage actions growing out of the February, 1937, accident in San Mateo, Mr. and Mrs. Babb failed to convince the jury they merited any part of the $25,000 compensation they asked for injuries, and Murray, in a cross-complaint, failed in his effort to get $16,000 damages from the Babbs. The cases were tried jointly in Judge Maxwell McNutt's court.

Jenkins' Assignees Lose Suit for Fees

Three prominent Burlingame residents lost their legal battle Tuesday to recover from San Mateo county and the board of supervisors $6,279.30 in inheritance tax fees.

The plaintiffs, H. W. Regan, prominent Burlingame resident; Postmaster Joseph V. Gaffey and City Clerk J. R. Murphy, sought recovery of this sum as commissions assigned them by former County Treasurer Harry E. Jenkins.

Superior Judge A. R. Cotton denied their petition for recovery of the sum which the trio had asked on the grounds that it was due Jenkins because they were part of his salary, which could not be changed during his term in office.

The $6,379.30 are the commissions asked for Jenkins' collecting inheritance taxes between the time a state amendment went into effect turning the fees over to the county, and the termination of Jenkins' term of office.

Attorneys of Gaffey, Regan and Murphy argued that regardless of the state amendment Jenkins or his assignees were entitled to the fees because they were part of his salary, which, according to law, could not be changed during his term of office.

Judge Cotton ruled that the commissions were entirely independent of Jenkins' salary as treasurer.

CHAPTER I

THE soap slid over the edge of the tub and across the bathroom floor, three feet beyond the reach of the tub's lovely occupant.

"Darn!" said Cilly. (Priscilla, to you. Miss Priscilla Pierce, of the late Bensonhurst Pierces.)

She slithered down to the edge of the tub and reached again. With two strong fingers, she grasped the soap, only to have it slide another yard toward the door.

"Darn!" she said again. Then to herself: "If I have to get out of this tub, I'm out for good."

Somewhere in the night a church clock struck. Cilly listened, counting the strokes. "Twelve o'clock," she murmured. "I'm going to bed."

She remembered that she had a full morning's work ahead of her the next day, if she was to finish that Harvey brief by noon. And she was never her best on Monday morning. Tomorrow would be no exception.

She jumped out of the tub, rescued the slippery soap and returned it to its cubicle above the tub. Then with a huge Turkish towel she rubbed her tall slim body until it glowed.

"If Amy Kerr had one iota of sense," she was thinking all the while, "she wouldn't have suggested another rubber of bridge at 11 o'clock. Nor would she be up on the roof now airing her blue dress! Airing her dress, my grandmother. She's never been so fussy before. What made her want to go up on the roof at 12 o'clock?"

Cilly grabbed her pajamas from the hook on the bathroom door and jumped into them unceremoniously. Amy might at least have realized that it was nerve-wracking to have the door unlocked when one was taking a bath. But tonight Amy was certainly inconsiderate.

"I won't be a minute, Cilly. . . . I'm just going up on the roof to air this blue dress so that I can wear it tomorrow. It smells like a gasoline station now. . . . Leave the door open, that's a dear."

WELL, it certainly was a long minute. More like 20.

Cilly went into the bedroom they shared together and sat down at the frilled dressing table. This was the moment of the daily hair-brushing—100 strokes. It wasn't all accident that Cilly's dull auburn hair shone so richly.

Seven, eight, nine, ten. . . .

Just a minute, to air this blue dress. Tommyrot! Cilly was thoroughly annoyed at Amy Kerr tonight. And not a little annoyed at herself for being such a jealous fool. It wasn't as if Amy was a different person by nature. She wasn't. She was a peach. In the two months they had shared the apartment, Cilly and Amy had grown as close as sisters.

Cilly had been doubtful at first about taking a strange girl in to share her home, but she had never regretted doubling up with Amy Kerr. And with expenses just about cut in half, they were already planning a trip to the West Indies that winter. That is, if nothing happened in the meantime.

Illustration by Ed Gunder

It wasn't pleasant up on the roof at midnight. . . . Tonight it was cloudy, and there was no moon. It would be terrifying all alone up there!

Seven, eight, nine, twenty. . . .

If nothing happened in the meantime. Actually, Cilly was thinking: "If Jim doesn't insist on getting married before then." He'd been on the point of it a dozen times, Cilly knew, but something always held him back.

"Oh, Cilly, darling!"—it was Jim who had christened her "Cilly" in place of the prim and pure "Priscilla" for her great-grandmother—"Oh, Cilly, if I could only run off with you right this very day . . . you do love me, don't you, darling? You will wait for me, no matter what happens?"

Wait for him! Hadn't she waited 27 years for someone exactly like Jim Kerrigan? If she waited another thousand years, would she ever find anyone else so utterly dear, so thoughtful, so tender?

Seven, eight, nine, forty. . . .

He'd never said exactly just what held him back, but Cilly understood. It was his new job. He had only been in New York a little over six months; he had to make good before he could ask a girl to marry him. She could well afford to be patient.

Seven, eight, nine, sixty. . . .

Or could she?

FOR the first time since she had known Jim, she felt a little twinge of uncertainty. These past few months it had been just Jim and she—just the two of them together. Dancing at the French Casino. Swimming at Jones Beach. Looping the loop at Coney Island. Cooking hot dogs over a campfire at Hillside Park. Holding hands at the Paramount. Stealing a kiss downstairs in the vestibule . . . just two people in all New York. Cilly Pierce and Jim Kerrigan.

Until tonight.

Until this very evening when she had suggested to Amy that they invite their respective beaus in for a quiet Sunday evening. "So we can all get to know each other better," she had said to Amy. "Four people can have so much more fun together than just two."

Well, they certainly got to know each other better. Jim any Amy, at any rate. You'd have thought they'd known each other all their lives. The way Amy's eyes lighted up when she introduced them . . . the where've-you-been-all-my-life look that Jim gave Amy. . . .

Seven, eight, nine, eighty. . . .

It was just too bad she couldn't have gone for Amy's date in the same spirit. Harry Hutchins. A loud-mouthed, conceited fool. The sort who can always tell the other fellow how to play bridge. A wise guy.

Cilly marveled that a girl like Amy could have stood his company for one evening. Amy was highly attractive—a girl with charm and poise and good breeding. Surely she could see through the bluff that was Harry Hutchins.

But apparently she didn't. To all appearances, she was completely gone on him. Why, if two days passed without her hearing from him, she'd call him at his hotel. It made Cilly mad.

Once she remarked about it to Amy, not that she had any right to comment. But Amy was such a good-hearted soul; she'd never realize when someone was giving her a raw deal.

"Let him chase you," Cilly had said. "There's more zest to a man when you keep him guessing."

But Amy had just shrugged. "Don't worry about me, Cilly," she replied. "You don't understand this affair between Harry and me."

NO, Cilly didn't understand it. But she understood Harry Hutchins. Only to well. He was the answer to every maiden's prayer—at least he thought so. And poor Amy was just another girl who had fallen prey to his deadly charm.

Cilly knew that Harry had other interests. In greener fields. It was no secret that Harry Hutchins was making a heavy play for Gloria Harmon, whose father had left her a string of chain stores. The Brooklyn rotogravure sections printed photographs of them together—at the races, at the smartest supper clubs in Manhattan, at the Harmon estate on Long Island. Even tonight, he had boasted of spending the previous week-end "down at Harmony Hall."

But all this went over poor Amy's head. Either she had not a bit of jealousy in her makeup, or she had a forlorn hope that in time she could win her precious Harry back.

Seven, eight, nine, one hundred. . . .

Cilly put the brush down. Perhaps that was it. Perhaps Amy had been so especially sweet to Jim this evening just to make Harry jealous. Cilly couldn't blame her for that.

However, that didn't explain this going up on the roof. And spending half an hour up there.

It wasn't pleasant up on the roof at midnight, not unless the moon rode high in a cloudless sky. Tonight it was cloudy, and there was no moon. It would be terrifying all alone up there!

A SHORT CUT TO HAPPINESS

THE WAY TO A MAN'S HEART IS THROUGH HIS STOMACH. Far be it from us to minimize the importance of such praiseworthy virtues as kindness, tolerance, unselfishness, or even a pretty face . . . but these are merely detours to husbandly affection compared with the path paved with perfect food . . . a road paved with incomparable Swift's branded T-bone steaks. Cotillons Back; Travelers View Horrors of War

Bringing with them mixed memories of the horrors of Spain's civil war and the beauty of their native France, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Cotillon ("Grace and Pierre"), owners of a restaurant just north of Atherton, are back at home today.

They returned last week from an eight-month trip that took them by motor through France, to Algeria, and to the northern part of Spain, where they saw the wake of ruined cities, the many orphans and the horrors left by the war. At Gavarni they were close enough to the fighting to hear the rumble of cannons.

Highlight of the trip was a visit with relatives in picturesque Pau, in the Pyrenees. Another key moment of the trip was a visit to the world exposition in Paris.

They made the return trip to America on the giant liner, "Normandie."

Now the well known peninsula French couple are at work preparing their restaurant for an October 2 opening.

As the result of 40-hour week legislation recently enacted in France, Saturday is now recognized as a legal holiday.

Toastmasters Treat Timely Speech Topics

Timely topics covering the Sino-Japanese war, traffic problems here, the advisability of making the harbor festival an annual affair, and the question of honorary college degrees were discussed by Toastmaster Club speakers Monday.

Lewis Franklin advocated construction of a pedestrian subway for school children's safety in crossing the El Camino Real and Broadway intersection. Clarence Holt also touched the traffic problem, painting a picture of the street arrangements of "The City of Tomorrow."

Fred Schmidt predicted that Japan would not be able to seize all of China, and said he did not believe the United States would be drawn into war because the country hasn't sufficient money invested there to justify such a move.

B. E. Myers advocated that college honorary degrees be given only to persons of merit in the field for which the degree is ordinarily given, not for solicitation of a gift, or advertising.

Fred O. Glover urged that the harbor festival be made an annual feature.

Driver Wins $2060 For Broken Back

Charles E. Layton, Missouri truck driver who had asked $21,000 damages for a broken back he incurred in a Howard avenue, Burlingame, collision early last year, was awarded $2060 compensation yesterday by Judge Maxwell McNutt.

The local jurist held that Dot Sappington of San Jose, defendant in the suit, was to blame for the crash, in which Sappington and his wife, Bessie, were also injured. The Sappingtons, in a cross complaint, had asked $10,000 damages of Layton. Their suit was denied.

Corpse Found By Caretaker

The body of Harold ("Hal") Fuller, who drowned near Brisbane last week while trying heroically to swim to shore for help for his two companions clinging to a swamped skiff, was found floating in the bay Sunday off the Alameda county estate of former State Sen. H. H. Breed near Hayward.

J. W. Zolski, caretaker of the Breed estate, found the body.

Cards in the victim's pockets identified him as Harold S. Fuller of Portland, and authorities asserted that he is the same person known as Hal Fuller, only name given for the victim of the fishing mishap.

Undersheriff Lawrence Nieri and Police Officer James W. Bedford of San Bruno rescued Svend Noble, 30, and Thomas J. Feeney, 28, from the overturned fishing boat.

Nieri, driving along the Bayshore highway, happened to witness the accident, and set out with Bedford, in the latter's boat, for a rescue that was only two-thirds successful.

Noble and Feeney said that Fuller had struck out for shore to bring help. He never reached land.

The body found yesterday was clad in riding breeches and high shoes, which corresponds to the description of clothing worn by Fuller.

AUTO DRIVER SHOWN MERCY WHEN CAR LICENSE SUSPENDED

Superior Court Grants Probation to Two Flagrant Law Violators

Two flagrant law violators won mercy in superior court here Monday afternoon.

William H. Grable, 37, East Palo Alto carpenter, was placed on one year's probation by Judge Maxwell McNutt for the offense of driving an automobile while his operator's license was under suspension for a September 10, 1936, conviction for drunken driving.

The probation was accorded Grable under the condition that he hand over his license plates to Probation Officer Francis Robinson for the probation term.

Court attaches pointed out that under the information filed against Grable, charging only driving with a suspended license, Judge McNutt was powerless to consider any more than the specific offense.

Probation Officer Francis Robinson's recommendation to the court was that Grable might be considered for probation on condition that either a fine or a jail sentence be imposed.

Highway patrol records showed that Grable, of Oakwood drive and Palo Verde, was arested by Patrolman Walter Sequeira September 4, 1936, for drunken driving near Redwood City. At that time Grable served one day in the county jail and paid a $95 fine, the sentence of Justice Edward I. McAuliffe.

Then on July 4, at 1:30 a. m., Grable was found, with his family in his car, driving "all over El Camino Real near Beresford," according to Highway Patrolman Manfred Walzberg.

Patrolman Walzberg and Elmer Grandy arrested Grable for erratic driving and for driving without a license. In addition, they locked his car up for the night because "he had been drinking," according to the patrolmen, "but not sufficiently to prove he was intoxicated."

Another to win leniency from Judge McNutt was Warren Chandler, 43, former county WPA worker who admitted burglarizing seven La Honda road week-end cabins over a period of two years. Chandler, who has served 49 days in the county jail, was ordered to serve 11 more and then go onto two years' probation.

Two men, Robert Sanchez, 21, Half Moon Bay laborer, and Cyrio F. Horlock, Sausalito boat captain, pleaded not guilty to Redwood City morals charges involving girls under 10. Sanchez will be tried before Judge A. R. Cotton, September 27; Horlock's trial will be set by Judge McNutt next week.

With the 1930 census, the foreign-born population of the United States totaled more than 14,000,000.

Relief Home Inmates Hear Music, Services

The San Mateo Junior Club, sponsored by Alice Lyttaker, and accompanied by Al Lyttaker's Rhythm Rascals, entertained the inmates of the county relief home to an hour of popular music Saturday afternoon.

Alice Lyttaker in charge of the social service department of the club, assisted by Lucille Roeckner, club president; Jessie Eitel, treasurer; Virginia Caffarrata, and Mrs. Leola Lower of the American Legion auxiliary distributed candy to the inmates.

Exchange Club Votes Fete Commendation

Commendation in the form of a letter of appreciation was authorized sent to the Harbor Opening Festival committee by the Redwod City Exchange Club, meeting Tuesday.

At the session, speakers were club members, Harvey E. Conner and Emil G. Steinegger, both of whom told of recent hunting trips.

Final plans were laid for the ladies' night next Wednesday at 7 p. m. at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel and for the baseball game tomorrow at 8 p. m. with the Lions club at Hawes lighted diamond.

CAST OF CHARACTERS

PRISCILLA PIERCE—heroine, young woman attorney.
AMY KERR—Cilly's roommate and murderer's victim.
JIM KERRIGAN—Cilly's fiance.
HARRY HUTCHINS—Amy's strange visitor.

Yesterday: Alone in her apartment, after midnight, Cilly becomes increasingly alarmed when Amy fails to return from the rooftop. She recalls it would be terrifying up there in the darkness!

CHAPTER II

CILLY'D been up there once herself—to get a coat she had had hanging out all day to air.

You ran up the five flights of stairs—that was all right, for there were lights on every landing. But from there on it was No-Man's-Land. You went up the other half-flight to the roof, and pushed the heavy iron door out. As you stepped out onto the roof, that door swung shut behind you with a bang—a loud, terrifying bang against the lonely silence on the roof.

Cilly was a courageous soul, but she had shuddered that first black moment after the door slammed behind her. There was nothing ahead but dark emptiness. The clothesline was just a few steps beyond the doorway, but in the darkness it seemed a mile away.

You picked your steps carefully, expecting any moment to trip over the raised platform under the lines; you held your hand out in front so that you wouldn't walk blindly into radio aerials. At every step you stumbled over a clothespin or a piece of rope.

There were the tall stacks, too: two from the furnace, and one from the incinerator which belched fire and brimstone into the black air above. At every step, you wondered just who or what lurked behind the next step. Not anything human, of course. You knew that.

If you met anyone on the roof, it would be poor old Mr. Johnson, the superintendent, dragged from his bed to check up on someone's aerial. And Mr. Johnson was a harmless soul.

But you didn't think of Mr. Johnson as you stepped out toward the clothesline. You thought of Dracula, and at every step you expected to see him before you, his black cape spread out bat-like, ready to enfold you. You thought of Dracula, and quickened your steps so that you stumbled, and as you stumbled you felt the monster upon you. . . .

You remembered all the stories you ever heard about ghosts that rise in graveyards at midnight. You remembered them all in the 10 or 20 seconds it took to cross from the heavy iron door to the clothesline. And because those 10 seconds seemed like 10 long, dreary years, you hurried as fast as ever you could; you grabbed that dress or coat down from the line with small regard for flying clothespins; and you fairly flew back to the big heavy door, lest Mr. Johnson come up and lock it for the night, and leave you out in that intense blackness until morning.

THIRTY seconds it took, at the most, to rush over to that clothesline and back. You didn't linger. Cilly hadn't lingered, and Cilly was as brave as the average. Even a little more brave than Amy. Amy would not come home alone evenings when Cilly had to work late. She didn't like to be alone in the apartment. She said so.

No, Amy wasn't the sort to linger in the terrifying blackness of the roof at midnight—not if she were alone.

Then Amy wasn't alone. It was all poppycock about wanting to air her blue dress. Amy was going up on the roof to meet someone. Who?

Harry Hutchins had left 10 minutes earlier than Jim. Amy could have walked down to the vestibule if she wanted to be alone with him. And given Jim a few minutes to say goodnight to her, Cilly.

But Amy had waved Harry out with a nonchalant air, and she had waited around with Jim and Cilly. She didn't even excuse herself and pretend that she was going to bed. She just waited around until Jim left, and then she immediately got the bright idea of taking her blue dress up on the roof.

If she had wanted to go up there so badly, she'd have said to Harry: "Come up on the roof for a minute with me, will you? I want to air a dress." That would be the natural thing to do, instead of waiting around for Jim to leave, and following him out.

So Cilly was annoyed at Amy. Annoyed and not a little hurt. They had gotten along so happily together. Up until tonight, Amy had never shown any trace of selfishness or pettiness. Cilly had really loved her. Was Amy at last showing her true colors?

CILLY walked wearily over to the bed and removed the spread. There was no sense sitting up all night to worry about it. If Jim really cared for her, he'd be back. And if he didn't, well, it was certainly much better to find him out before she married him. Much better. She wasn't a foolish schoolgirl. She could face a disappointment sensibly. Quite sensibly. Was ever a woman in love sensible, she wondered.

Twelve-twenty, the tiny clock on the vanity said.

Let Amy stay up there all night if she wanted to. Let Amy take Jim Kerrigan if she wanted to. . . . Cilly was going to sleep.

But of course she didn't. As soon as her head touched the pillow, she knew that she wouldn't get to sleep for hours. When you're unhappy, sleep doesn't come immediately to slip you quietly into oblivion. You have to smooth out your thoughts first. You have to banish ugly suspicions, and bitterness, and jealousy.

Cilly tried to do that. She honestly did try to realize that Amy was a dear, that she was honest and fair and altogether too kind-hearted to hurt anyone. Besides, Cilly told herself sternly: "You're a pretty poor sort to build up such a case against Jim the very first time another girl looks at him. What a jealous, nagging wife you'll be!

Then, quite unexpectedly, she realized what had happened. She realized how utterly silly she had been. It was all so very simple. The big black door had slammed shut while Amy was hanging up her dress. Sunday was Mr. Johnson's day off, but he always returned about midnight and made the regular rounds of the house. He had locked Amy out!

All this time that she had been painting a devil in her imagination, Amy had been up on that terrifying roof alone—locked out!

CILLY jumped out of bed, slipped on her shoes without her stockings, and took her coat out of the closet. She'd go right up and unlatch the door. Poor Amy. . . .

Cilly stopped, clutching the coat in her hands. Her heart turned to ice in her breast. For the still night air was suddenly shattered by a wild, terrifying cry—the deathly, agonized cry of a human being.

Shrill and high-pitched, it pierced the midnight quiet for an eternal second, then died down to a rasping, choking murmur. A moment of silence followed—a silence so intense that it could be felt in every nerve.

Then there was a dull thud outside Cilly's bedroom window—a heavy, swift thud, as if something had fallen a long way. . . .

In an instant, Cilly was at the window, and as she looked out, she forgot the six-foot drop to the ground, she forgot that she was clad only in pajamas and shoes. She jumped quickly; she knelt beside that crushed, broken figure that had come hurtling from the roof.

"Amy!" she cried. "Amy!"

But Amy Kerr was beyond all hearing.

Vaguely, Cilly was conscious of windows being raised along the street, of heads craning out, inquiring the trouble. She looked down at this twisted, broken body that had only a few minutes ago been a lovely, lively girl. Amy still clutched the blue dress in one hand. The other hand, clenched in the terror of death, slowly relaxed; a slip of newspaper fluttered to the ground. Cilly picked it up, unthinking, and tucked it into her pajama pocket.

MENLO PARK NEWS NOTES

The 40 and 8 degree team of the 26th district installed officers of Menlo Park American Legion Post No. 443 Wednesday at 8:15 p.m. in the Legion Hall on Oak Grove avenue.

Many department and district officers, both past and present, attended these ceremonies, at which time the following officers were installed: Herbert Dietrich, commander; Daniel Sullivan, first vice commander; Floyd Beach, second vice commander; Bernard Larrecou, finance officer; Carl Wild, chaplain; George Condos, historian and past commander; Martin Johnson, sergeant-at-arms; George Condos and Louis Belotti, executive committee.

Junior Past Commander Condos, assisted by ladies of the auxiliary, served a delicious ham dinner at which time John Zamparlo, who is leaving for New York this week to attend the American Legion convention, was honored.

After the convention he will go to Italy and France on the special Legion good will tour. Besides visiting the battlefields of France and other important and historic places, he will visit relatives in Italy.

Father Raberg has been succeeded by Father Maurice O'Brien of San Francisco. Father Raberg carries with him the best wishes of his many friends in Menlo Park.

James O'Keefe has returned from the State Bar Association's meeting at Del Monte. He reports a large attendance and some important resolutions adopted by the attorneys.
